

BLACK TROOPS DEFENDED.

Mr. Chamberlain Upholds Arming South African Natives.

Would Use Indian Soldiers in Europe or Elsewhere. He Necessity Demanded—The Irish Members Aroused to Great Indignation.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Secretary Chamberlain informed the House of Commons today that owing to the killing of non-combatants and natives, the Government had to withdraw the troops from the Transvaal. He said that the Government had to withdraw the troops from the Transvaal. He said that the Government had to withdraw the troops from the Transvaal. He said that the Government had to withdraw the troops from the Transvaal.

The occasion for the foregoing was a debate which concerned a vote for the Colonial Office. Mr. Chamberlain spoke strenuously in favor of the blacks and his statements were certain to astonish the loyalists in South Africa. He declared that the natives are valiant soldiers even against civilized races. There was no obligation, he added, not to arm them. Great Britain had not armed them merely on grounds of policy. Continuing, he said:

"I say that merely because I do not wish it to be understood that we are arming a people for another war. We should not hesitate to employ our splendid Indian troops; we should not hesitate to employ the splendid troops who recently fought in Ashanti. I say we are perfectly justified in employing them in any war."

At this point John Dillon, the Irish leader, asked: "In Europe?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Chamberlain, "in Europe or elsewhere."

John MacNeill, member for South Down, asked: "We dare you to do it."

Mr. Chamberlain continued: "Great Britain has made a great and immediate sacrifice in not employing natives as mercenaries. We might have had 20,000 Basutos on the banks of the Boers. On the other hand, we have found, again and again, dead Kafirs in the Boer positions, with arms in their hands."

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The "Daily News" thinks that the most serious part of Mr. Chamberlain's speech was his announcement of the withdrawal of a considerable number of British troops from South Africa in September. The paper declares that the announcement is bound to inspire the Boers with renewed hope, and will also produce important effects on the Continent.

NO ASCENSION MADE.

M. Santos-Dumont Not Anxious to Tempt Contrary Winds.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—A crowd of curious people assembled at St. Cloud to see Santos-Dumont make his ascent in his new balloon. He was advertised in the newspapers as another ascent by M. Santos-Dumont in his balloon. M. Santos-Dumont declared he had no intention of making an ascent today, as the wind was too strong. He said that he had never claimed that his balloon could be navigated in all kinds of winds. He expressed pleasure at the receipt of a gold medal from the Aero Club.

M. Almir, the former Secretary of the Aero Club, was also present. He declared that he intended to contest his unjust treatment by the club, which ousted him from his position of paid secretary because it is alleged, he expressed his admiration for M. Santos-Dumont and against the Remards, the French balloonists.

A SWIFT FRENCH STEAMER.

La Saverie Makes Twenty Knots on Her Trial Trip.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A despatch to the "Times" from Paris says that the new steamer of the General Transatlantic Line, La Saverie, made twenty knots on her trial trip, making her the fastest merchantman built in France. The steamer will be attached to the Havre-New York line.

KRUGER'S REPLY TO STEYN.

The English Censors Finally Make the Message Public.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The papers this morning print Mr. Kruger's reply to the overtures for peace, which was received on July 5 at Standerton, then the headquarters of the Boers. This reply, the speaker's stand in Accra, being represented. The latter, the old capital of Colorado, was represented by a spot representing the original 20 by 22 ft. capital still standing. Colonel Roosevelt rose to his feet and stood as the rough riders and his command filed by. He was visibly affected.

Mr. Roosevelt addressed the Colorado editors at their banquet tonight. "Roosevelt in 1901" is becoming a popular phrase here.

ROOSEVELT'S WARM WELCOME.

The Colorado Celebration Developing Into a Boom for 1904.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Aug. 2.—Twenty thousand people crowded around the speaker's stand in Accra, Pa. at 10:30 a. m. today to hear Vice President Roosevelt. The subject, "The growth of the West during the past quarter of a century," was familiar and of stirring interest. From 2 to 5 p. m. Colonel Roosevelt inspected the historic parade from the grandstand on Cascade Avenue. He occupied a central box with Governor Orman and other distinguished men of the State. He received an ovation on entering, and thousands remained to shake his hand after the parade.

The parade itself was a State affair. Denver, Pueblo, Florence, Canon City, Colorado City, and other cities being represented. The latter, the old capital of Colorado, was represented by a spot representing the original 20 by 22 ft. capital still standing. Colonel Roosevelt rose to his feet and stood as the rough riders and his command filed by. He was visibly affected.

Mr. Roosevelt addressed the Colorado editors at their banquet tonight. "Roosevelt in 1901" is becoming a popular phrase here.

The streets of Colorado Springs were gorgeously illuminated tonight. Tomorrow is Rough Riders and Indians day. A public reception for Mr. Roosevelt will take place at 1:30 p. m.

$1.00 to Harper's Ferry and Winchester and Return, Via B. & O. R. H. Leaving Washington 8 a. m., August 4, returning via Winchester 7, and Harper's Ferry 8:15 p. m., same day.

The "Department Limited" For Chesapeake Beach leaves District Line station at 1:30 p. m. Through last train.

PLEASURE SEEKERS DROWNED.

Four Out of a Party of Six Persons Perish.

ROANOKE, Va., Aug. 2.—A small boat containing a pleasure party of six persons was overturned in a river near Central City, Va., last night, and four of the occupants were drowned. The others were rescued by people who saw the accident.

The dead are: MRS. MARIE HEMMING, and forty-five years old; RUTH HEMMING, her daughter, aged sixteen years; and two others.

Mrs. Hemming was the wife of John Hemming, a well-known coal operator. The bodies of those drowned have not yet been recovered.

THE CUBAN ELECTION LAW.

Four Articles of the Project Adopted by the Convention.

HAVANA, Aug. 2.—The Constitutional Convention met today and approved the first four articles of the proposed electoral law, with the exception of the last clause of the fourth article. Some members of the convention are of the opinion that, in order to become a provincial governor or legislator, it will not be necessary for a man to be the head of a family or a taxpayer. He will now be required to be a resident of the province for a year before the election, to possess a degree or to have held an elective office. The conditions for senatorial and presidential elections are left unchanged.

Senator Sagun objected that the conditions required to be fulfilled by senatorial electors were more exacting than those imposed on presidential electors. He also argued that the senatorial electors should be left free to vote for whom they chose instead of being bound to vote for a particular candidate.

Regarding the last clause of Article IV, which provides that the convention shall settle difficulties which arise in the elections, it was argued by some that this was a usurpation of the functions of the executive government. No vote was taken in the matter.

There was some talk of changing the capital of the island to Santa Clara where the Government is established in order to get away from the politically unhealthy atmosphere of Havana.

No change was made in the conditions that will have to be fulfilled by candidates for governors, councilors, and representatives. All must either be Cuban or have been domiciled in the island for at least eight years in the country after naturalization.

WED IN THE EARLY HOURS.

A Lieutenant and a Washington Girl Married Romantically.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Justice of the Peace Frank P. Leane, of 24 First Street, Jersey City, told a story today of a marriage ceremony which he was called upon to perform at his home about 2 o'clock this morning. The Justice said he was awakened by persistent ringing of his door bell. He concluded after a time to answer it in person, and when he did so he found standing in his doorway a young man and woman, both young.

The man said he was Dr. Alvin Walter Williams, a surgeon in the United States Army, stationed at Governor's Island, New York. He said that he had been called to the island to perform a marriage ceremony. He said that he had been called to the island to perform a marriage ceremony. He said that he had been called to the island to perform a marriage ceremony.

Justice Leane said what was necessary and sent the young couple away as man and wife.

Lieut. Alvin Walter Williams, assistant surgeon, 10th Cavalry, recently transferred from Fort Leavenworth, Col., to Fort Columbus, Governor's Island, a native of Columbus, Ga., and formerly one of the house surgeons at Bellevue Hospital, told a reporter tonight of the marriage ceremony.

He was the bridegroom and said that his bride was Miss Elizabeth Morris Sample, a daughter of James A. Sample, of Washington, D. C., chief of the issue division in the office of the United States Treasury.

The lieutenant said: "Miss Sample has been visiting friends in New York for four or five months, and we had been engaged some time. On Thursday, August 1, she came to New York, and, naturally, I talked a good deal of our future. Finally we concluded to spend as little of the future apart as possible, and the upshot of it was that we decided to get married."

"Once we had come to a decision, we lingered no longer over the dinner than was necessary, and went over the river to Jersey and were married by a Justice of the peace in Jersey City. We are now keeping house on Governor's Island, and there is the whole story."

A STATEMENT FROM PHILLIPS.

The Firm to Resume Business on Monday Next.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—George H. Phillips, the defuncted crown king, gave out a statement today. He said the George H. Phillips Company would resume business next Monday. He said that the company had been overpaid its customers $200,000; that it had $200,000 due from accounts carried; that every claim will be met. Rumors of crookedness in the firm's accounts were abroad today. Mr. Phillips was not surprised to hear them, but he said he preferred Mr. Goodwin to speak for him in the matter. The lawyer said:

"Such reports are always about in a case like this. Mr. Phillips will neither deny nor confirm them. They may be true. The books are in such shape that we cannot tell yet. But so far as any story of dishonesty on the part of the members of the firm is concerned, it is without basis. It is possible the errors made by the clerks were made with the purpose of concealing some theft, but we don't think so. As I say, it's possible, but not probable."

Crime in Connecticut.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 2.—Figures which have been compiled giving the number of offenders in confinement in the penal and reformatory institutions of the State on June 30 for the past seven years indicate that during the past four years the tendency has been toward increasing volume of crime in Connecticut. The minimum number of criminals in confinement, 2,301, was reached in the year 1897. For the current year it is only 2,035, although between 1897 and 1901 the population of the State has increased over 27,000.

$1.25 to Baltimore and Return Via B. & O. Saturday and Sunday. August 2 and 4, tickets good to return until following Monday. Good on all trains except Royal Limited.

Spend Sunday at Chesapeake Beach. Cool, clean, comfortable, safely.

$1.25 to Baltimore and Return Via B. & O. Saturday and Sunday. August 2 and 4, tickets good to return until following Monday. Good on all trains except Royal Limited.

Spend Sunday at Chesapeake Beach. Cool, clean, comfortable, safely.

MAKING ONE MORE APPEAL.

The Amalgamated's Executive Board Starts for New York.

Aspersions on the Honesty of Shaffer and Williams Said to Have Led to a Last Resort—Hoping to Obtain More Favorable Conditions.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 2.—One last and big effort is to be made by the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers to induce the United States Steel Corporation to modify the terms it has laid out. In pursuance of this plan, almost the entire executive board of the association, fifteen men in all, started for New York tonight to see J. Pierpont Morgan. The executive board wants to get from Mr. Morgan himself a statement of the terms Shaffer and Secretary Williams are offering to them. To most of the members Shaffer's insistence that they accept the conditions offered to them were offered them at the little conference in the Hotel Lincoln, three weeks ago tomorrow, seems so unreasonable that they desire to hear for themselves. Insinuations were made by one of the board members, who is a well-known and honest of Shaffer and Williams, and both men protested indignantly and sorrowfully against any aspersions on their honor.

The suggestion that the board go to New York and try its own luck in effecting a settlement and investigate the doings of the two superior officers came from those officers themselves. Shaffer is said to have explained that he advised the acceptance of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit the association's original demands before a jury, and that the board accepted the next conditions he would impose, if he condescended to parley at all with the association, would be far more rigorous; that public opinion would not permit the board to accept the terms of Morgan's terms, even though they were not favorable, simply because the association was conducting a losing fight, that, as it was, the United States Steel Corporation would not submit